Anna's Afternoon Tea

The introduction of Afternoon Tea, a quintessentially British pastime which dates back to the early nineteenth century when Anna, the 7th Duchess of Bedford is said to have complained of “having that sinking feeling” during the late afternoon.

To overcome this feeling, a light meal consisting of tea (usually Darjeeling) and cakes or sandwiches was served.

Honouring tradition, enjoy Anna's Afternoon Tea served in the stunning surroundings of our Park Room against the scenic backdrop of Hyde Park and to the soft sounds of our resident pianist.
